Why is my application in review?

Our IT system can approve your application automatically, but in some cases we will need more information before we can come to a decision on its eligibility. When we need more information our IT system puts your application into review and sends it to one of our team who will contact you with a request for supporting evidence. In most cases you have up to 28 days to provide the requested information or your application may be rejected. Your payment will still be calculated from the date you applied, even if further information is asked for.

How can you help to speed up the process?

- 1) Complete your Domestic RHI application, and check in MyRHI to see if there is a message saying that your application is in review.
- 2) If your application is in review you may be able to send us the information we need straight away. Tables 1 and 2 explain the reasons why your application could be in review and detail the information that we might ask for. If you don't send us the information we need, you'll receive a request asking for it from our team within 5 days of submitting your application.
- 3) Please send copies of the relevant information to us. Scanned or photographed documents are fine. The fastest way to do this is to email them to domesticRHI@ofgem.gov.uk, quoting your application number in the email's subject heading.
- 4) Once we have your additional evidence we will assess your application to see if it meets our eligibility criteria, and will let you know if your application has been successful. Please note, we may ask you for more information once your application has been assessed.
